

TUNNEY RETAINS
WORLD'S TITLE;
DEFEATS DEMPSEY

Former Champion Gives An Excellent Exhibition Of His Ability

TUNNEY MADE RALLY

Champion Was Down For The Count of Nine But Came Back

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor
CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Jack Dempsey!
This writer, whose poor, weak words are humble and strangely contrite this morning, do hereby salute you.
You were a man, a great man, last night as you failed to win back your heavyweight championship and it took a younger and, for the mere moment at least, a better man to beat you.
Five years ago—, but why exhume the past and apply it to the present?

The last bout for the heavyweight championship of the world was not fought five years ago. It was fought last night and the better man, judged on last night's standards, won.

Gene Tunney! Man that you are of few words but big ones, I give you all I have in the way of sincere and honest admiration. You were on the floor for a count that reached that hat size of a Goliath, nine and seven-eighths or something. But you got up and you won and the man who can do that is the man who may beset me forever more with words that neither he nor I may be able to understand.

Dempsey had his moment. It came in the seventh round when he had Tunney within a split second of being counted out. Some freely declare today that the moment was too long; that Tunney was on the floor too long; that, in reality, Tunney was out and Dempsey was in, which may be taken as a fair example of what manner of man this Dempsey is.

He had them arguing on the question of fair or foul punch in the Sharkey fight two months ago. Today, he had them asking whether referee Dave Barry counted nine or nineteen in the seventh round over Tunney. It did seem the part of a long line.

However, two near-chumps came on in an anti-climax after the big fight and I noted that when one of them scored a knockdown and failed to retire to a corner, the count was first begun, then abandoned and then resumed at the count of one after he had abided by the rules. Dempsey was over-long in departing from his position over Tunney's prostrate form in that seventh round.

But what a man he was, whether he tarried or not. Even Tunney must have thought of that, if he thought of anything, as he sat there on the floor with his eyes blank and dull. For Dempsey was a man last night whose real greatness, in a physical way, was behind him, but whose moral stamina simply would not say die.

For all I know, since I have consulted no one and do not wish to do so, the assembled intelligentsia may be muttering in its beard over that count that Barry gave Tunney. They even may be arguing as to who actually won and lost the fight. They shouldn't.

I am conscious of the fact that a lot of men around this ringside are soliciting opinions as to whether the count was right or wrong. And there you have the thing all over again—fair or foul; long or no count; as we poor husters would say. As I see it, the fact of the matter is that Dempsey had his moment and wouldn't take it.

Old men get that way. It is called ultra-conservatism and it means that what you did in your rash youth, you won't do in your old age. Imagine the young, impetuous Dempsey of 1919 having a helpless man before him and refusing to do anything about it for a full minute.

What I wish to assert is that Dempsey lost the fight and the honor of being the only ex-champion of the heavyweights to regain the title in that seventh round. When Tunney got up, it seemed that Dempsey couldn't go wrong. But he did.

Age, the great leveler, the acme of conservatism, had made an ordinary fighter of Dempsey in the crisis of his competitive life.

"Just how long was that count over Tunney, twelve or fourteen seconds?" asked a Dempsey man after the fight.
It wouldn't make the slightest difference to me if it was a million. The old Dempsey rush would have annihilated Tunney after he did get up, but Dempsey lacked the instinct or, great man that he otherwise was, he pulled a plain, ordinary, unmitigated bone.
Anyhow, he made not the merest attempt to carry a punch-drunk man by storm and even went so far as to beckon him to come near, when the man through sheer weakness could go no where but back.

And so this great moment passed and soon Tunney was himself again, the champion who had carried the early rounds and had Dempsey all but out in the fourth. Indeed, only a single round after his distress in the seventh, he had Dempsey on the floor for a count of one with a left hook for the jaw and for the remainder of the fight cut him up about the eyes almost as

Presidential Timber

CHARLES E. HUGHES

(By International News Service)
Speaking of "Presidential timber," Charles Evans Hughes looms as one of the strongest Republican "oaks" available for the nomination next year, in the opinion of visionary political minds who already can distinguish candidates on the convention horizon.

Hughes' friends stoutly insist there is no "dark horse complex" about his chances in the Republican nomination.
The feeling of his adherents was aptly and tersely expressed by one who, when asked if Hughes was a possible "dark horse," replied, "not so dark."

The nearer the date for the Republican national convention approaches, the larger grows Hughes' candidacy despite his failure thus far to openly announce his quest of the nomination.

It was in 1916, when he contested the Presidency with Woodrow Wilson, that Hughes' election was conceded by the democrats, Wilson himself conceding victory to Hughes and formally congratulating him. Belated returns, however, showed California for Wilson by a comparatively few votes and the portals of the White House closed on Hughes.

Hughes' public career is long and varied and his name has been before the world for many years. He has served as Governor of New York, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court and Secretary of State during two administrations. He is 65 years old.

Benjamin W. James Weds
Miss Merita L. Carey

Benjamin W. James, of Bridgewater, and Miss Merita L. Carey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Carey, of Atlantic City, N. J., were married at the home of the groom's father, Mr.
Richard James, Bridgewater, on Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. H. Willhite, pastor of the Credit Memorial Baptist Church, Bristol. The wedding took place at 5.30.

The bride was attractively gowned and carried an arm bouquet of white carnations. She was given away by her father, Miss Rebecca James, sister of the groom, played the wedding march. Misses Alice Carey and Caroline E. Jackson were the flower girls.
J. Anthony Jackson was the best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's father to which just a few friends of the couple were invited. There were guests present from Atlantic City, Bristol, Langhorne and Bridgewater.

Mr. and Mrs. James will reside with Mr. James' father for the present.

Mr. James was born in Bridgewater and attended the public school there.
He has been employed for the past 18 years by Simon Brothers, Cornwells Heights.

ANNOUNCE SALE

Class No. 4 of the M. E. Sunday School will hold a bake sale on Saturday, October 1st, at 11 a. m., in the building, Wood and Mill streets.
Should the building be under renovation at or before that date the sale will be held on the same date and at the same hour at the residence of Mrs.
Henry H. H. Poole, 238 Wood street.

BAKE SALE

The Girl Reserves of the Bristol High School will give a bake sale tomorrow in the show room of Whippet Motor Car Company, Farragut avenue, and also at 204 Mill street.

Edgely Man Burned By Automobile Explosion

When preparing to start home from his employment at the Paterson Parchment Paper Company plant on Wednesday night, E. R. Burmet, of Edgely, was painfully burned about the left leg, when a small explosion occurred in his automobile.

Mr. Burmet was brought to the Harriman Hospital, where he has been under treatment, and his injuries have responded to treatment in such a manner that he will be able to return to his home within the next two days.

APPROVED BY THE PEOPLE

(EDITORIAL)

EVER since Borough Council passed the ordinance providing for a consolidation of the volunteer fire department with two paid drivers, last November, to meet the requirements of the Philadelphia Suburban Underwriters Association, those who have opposed that action have contended that it did not have the approval of the citizens of Bristol.

The regular Republicans of the community have at all times stood squarely behind Borough Council, and it was the one real issue in last Tuesday's Primary—the first actual opportunity that the people have had to express themselves upon that subject.

They have done so in unmistakable terms, and have definitely indicated their support and approval of Borough Council by overwhelming majorities.

There was no qualification about the approval given Borough Council and the regular Republicans of the community, for the latter, in making their nominations for the Primary, were careful to keep the subject definitely before the voters, free of confusion with any other question or issue.

Except where there were vacancies to be filled, they renominated those incumbents of Borough Council and other offices whose terms were expiring, and the voters were confronted with the clear question of approving or rejecting the action of Borough Council in providing for a consolidated volunteer fire department with two paid drivers.

The result was all that has been contended by those who participated in Council's action, or who have given it their hearty support. Mr. Gilkeson and Mr. Smoyer, who were the leaders of the opposition to the November, 1926, ordinance, were both defeated in their quests for nomination for Borough Council.

Mr. Nevegold, Assistant Chief of the existing fire defense system, and who became a candidate for Assessor in the Sixth Ward, likewise was defeated, and by an even greater majority.
Only Mr. Myers, of all the Independent aspirants, was successful in procuring nomination, as a consequence of which the numerical division of the Republicans in Borough Council remains exactly what it was prior to the Primary.

The people have passed judgment upon the question and the issue has been settled. It has been removed from the realm of further controversy by the Republican voters of Bristol.

"WHITEY" OPDYKE LEADS HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN

Newly-Appointed Captain To Be in Charge of Contest
This Afternoon

EXPECT A GOOD GAME

"Whitey" Opdyke, the newly appointed captain, will lead the Bristol High football team against Newtown High gridders in the opening game of the 1927 season on the athletic field at Wilson avenue and Garfield street, this afternoon.

Coach Townsend will in all probability send the following team on the field: Earl, left end; Shiffer, left tackle; Satterthwaite, left guard; Young, center; Winslow, right guard; Di Risi, right tackle; Opdyke, right end; Strumfels, quarterback; Spada-cino, left half; Harrison, right half, and Slatoff, full back.

The squad of 33 players has been sent through a rigid course of training for the last two weeks and shows promise of developing into one of the best aggregations ever to represent the local school.

An open field game with good interference, is the style developed by Coach Townsend with a hard running set of backs. In a scrimmage held last Wednesday, Mr. Townsend concentrated on tackling low and hard and forward passing.

In Newtown, the local boys will find stiff opposition for their first game, as the up county team has some of the best prospects in their line-up ever developed.

EDDINGTON

In paragraphs headed "Edgington—A Good Place to Live," L. Creighton Vandegrift asks this question: "How many of us remember the old Edgington Wharf, where the John A. Warner and many other boats at its day used to stop?"

It is safe to say that many of the older residents of the town cannot forget the scene presented about the old wharf when the freight and passenger boats of years back docked there.

The wharf still stands, but its appearance is greatly changed. It was long ago that the freight cabin disappeared as well as the boats.
During the days when the Delaware was used as one of the main sources of transportation between Trenton, Philadelphia and points beyond, many were the crafts that stopped at Ed-gington; and the moonlight excursions were likewise numerous.

Edgington residents not only enjoyed boating on the historic stream but fishing in its waters as well. Mr.
Vandegrift laments the fact that the perch have practically disappeared, as well as the famous Delaware River shad; and concludes by saying: "Let us hope that the sewage system that Philadelphia is planning will stop the pollution of the waters of the Delaware and that it will again be filled with perch and shad as of old."

FOUR SCOUTS LEAVE FOR BIG EXPOSITION

Bucks County Council Sends
One from Each of Four Districts

TRIP FREE TO SCOUTS

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 23.—Sponsored by the camp committee of the Bucks County Council of Boy Scouts and made possible through the generosity of James Brooks and friends, of the Bristol district; Thomas Stock-ham, of the Delaware River Valley district; and Thomas and George Ross, of the Doylestown district; and William Hunsicker and friends, of the North Penn Valley district, four Boy Scouts who won the Mohawk Award at Camp Buccoo this summer left Wednesday under the guidance of two leaders for the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass.

The Mohawk Award was promised a Scout in each of the four districts of the Bucks County Council who won the most points in a camp educational point card contest the past Summer.
Over ten thousand points were secured by the many boys who attended camp. The following Scouts were winners and alternates respectively:

Doylestown district, Edward Gar-lits; alternate, Otto Lock. Bristol district, James Hill; alternate, Walter Kornstedt. North Penn Valley district, George Bossard; alternate, Mahlon Heaney. Delaware Valley district, George Ambler; alternate, John New.

The four winners left Wednesday Others in the party included Winfield O. Weisel, of the camp committee, and Scout Executive William F. Liver-more.

The party will travel through the Palisades National Park, by the Bear Mountain Bridge, stopping for evening colors at West Point, through the Storm King Highway, crossing the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie, then over to Great Barrington, Mass., via the famous Jacob's Ladder to Springfield, Mass. Thursday and Friday afternoon, up until four o'clock, will be spent at the exposition. Leaving for New York City on Friday afternoon the party will travel through Hartford and New Haven following Long Island Sound down to Yonkers, where they will spend the night through the courtesy of the Yonkers Boy Scout Council. Saturday morning will include a trip through National Headquarters, the Woolworth Building, the Battery, and the Statue of Liberty.

Saturday afternoon will include a trip to the Zoo, National Museum, Aquarium, Fine Arts, and Riverside Drive. Sunday morning the Scouts will attend services at St. John the Divine, the mammoth beautiful cathedral being constructed at Morningside Heights. Sunday afternoon the boys and leaders will return home.

From the Scout's viewpoint it will increase their interest through the scouting exhibition and will mean for them many new experiences. From a Council viewpoint it will secure a

LATE NEWS

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 23 (I.N.S.)—Congressman Thomas S. Butler has been appointed to the Board of Trustees of the local State Teachers' College, it was learned today. He was appointed on September 1st by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Keith.

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 23 (I.N.S.)—Choosing dynamite as a means to commit suicide, Michael Billie, 48, father of six children, is dead at his home in Drifton, near here, today.
Billie tied two sticks of dynamite to his head and set off the charge, after sending his six motherless children to bed. The parlor, in which he committed suicide, was wrecked by the explosion.

LIBERIA'S DEVELOPMENT
IS TOLD OF IN DETAIL

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Bussell Have Just Returned From African Country

CLIMATE IS MILD THERE

Political growth of Liberia, as well as something of her agricultural and educational outlook, was dwelt upon yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Conrad T.
Bussell, as they spoke at length about the possibilities for development of natural resources of that African country.

Mr. Bussell, who is supervisor of customs, employed by the Liberian government, left the United States four years ago, and is now enjoying his second visit to his homeland. Mrs.
Bussell was formerly Miss Pauline Winterstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
A. F. Winterstein, of 211 Radcliffe street, Bristol.

Founded over a century ago by freed American slaves, the small country on the west coast of Africa has grown in strength and boasts of a republican form of government modeled after that of our own. From the colored race there is elected at stated intervals a president, and selection of cabinet members is made, similar to the method followed here.

Liberia, which comprises a little less than 50,000 square miles, was purchased by the Liberians years ago, from the natives. The natives at that time were in a primitive stage of evolution, and much time was required in subduing them. Five counties are now within the borders of Liberia, and although the method of government is similar to our own, dealings with the native tribes are novel in many ways.
There are many native tribes throughout this small republic, and in any matters in which the government's directing hand is needed, the chiefs of the tribes are dealt with as the leaders of their tribesmen.

"There are no locks in Liberia," remarked Mr. Bussell in speaking of the honesty and trustworthiness of the people. "There are few thefts, and fine order is always experienced." Both he and Mrs. Bussell spoke of the strength of custom among the natives, stating that the manner in which they follow their olden customs presents a stronger force for order than would result from any set of laws.

The educational standard of the country is slowly but steadily being raised, and a few public schools are found within the boundaries. This fact, coupled with the future predicted by some as far as agriculture is concerned, will mean much for Liberia's people.

The soil is exceptionally productive, and rice, which grows quite readily in that portion of the globe, is one of the main crops. Sugar cane, coffee, palm-oil, corn, tobacco, rubber and all citrus fruits are to be found in abundant. A few years ago the Firestone Rubber Company acquired an interest in one million acres, and today employs over ten thousand natives and 100 Americans and Europeans on its rubber plantations in Liberia. "There is a wonderful opportunity for agricultural development in this African country," said Mr. Bussell, "and there is grown by the natives and citizens some of the finest coffee in the world." The trees are of the variety usually found in tropical countries and the flowers quite colorful.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Bussell, during their stay in that part of the world is in Monrovia, capital of Liberia. Americans and Europeans residing in that country number about 500, including many missionaries.

In reference to the climatic conditions it was learned that the country is swept at all times by a lovely breeze from the ocean, the temperature varying from 64 to 90 or 95 degrees in the sun. In respect of temperature there is a difference noted in the countries to the north and south of Liberia, heat which would naturally be expected of countries near the equator being experienced in other countries, but not in Liberia. Because

RECOUNT VOTES CAST
IN 1ST WARD, 2ND PREC.

Court Allows Petition And Ballots Are Recounted
Today

SMOYER GAINS THREE

(Special to Courier) DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 23.—Upon the petition of Vance W. Betz, Howard P.
Fennimore and William E. Mullin, qualified electors of the second precinct of First Ward, Bristol Borough, which was presented through their counsel, Franklin Gilkeson, to the Bucks County Court yesterday afternoon, Judge William C. Ryan directed that the ballot box of that district be brought to the Court this morning at 10 o'clock.

The petitioners alleged:
"That at the Primary Election held in said precinct on September 20th, for the nomination of candidates for Borough Council for said ward, and upon information received which they consider reliable, your said petitioners pray that fraud, although not manifest on the above return of votes, was committed in the computation of the votes cast for the office of Borough Council from the first ward in the second precinct of Bristol. The petitioners pray your court to open the ballot boxes of the second precinct of the first ward in Bristol."

Judge Ryan directed that James E.
Monney, judge; C. J. McGinley and Edward J. Fox, inspectors of election, appear in court this morning. The ballot box was brought into court in the custody of John J. McGuckin, chief of police of Bristol.

The Court appointed A. Harry Clayton, Doylestown, and Harry B. Stenson, Bristol, to make the recount.

The original election returns showed the following result of the vote:

Smoyer, Republican, 172; Winter, Republican, 225.

The recount showed the following:
Smoyer, Republican, 174; Winter, Republican, 224; Smoyer, Democrat, 1.

The recount cut the lead of Winter from eight votes in the ward down to five votes, and Smoyer was given one Democratic vote.

The non-computation of the ballots was due to a difference of judgment over the proper marking of the disputed ballots.

BRISTOL A. A. READY TO BATTLE YARDLEY

The Bristol A. A. football squad is ready to open its league schedule here Sunday against Yardley. The visitors will come to Bristol with practically the same team that gave the locals such a hard game last season.

Coach Frank Black has been holding practice down on the Sullivan field every other night this week and believes his boys are in better condition to play through a hard season than ever before.

The line has been strengthened with some reserve men, there being 15 men out for positions on the line alone. In the backfield, Coach Black will have plenty of men to pick from having three complete backfields.

Manager Gallagher, of Yardley, has collected a strong outfit led by Captain "Russ" Willard, the all-scholastic center; Eddy Huddy, backfield star and expert drop kicker, together with the Malady Brothers, etc.

The Sullivan Field has been put in wonderful condition by "Red" Waters, the groundskeeper. Seats have been arranged to take care of 1500 people.

Tullytown

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bailey, of Brookline, Pa., and Mrs. Elizabeth Ellis, of Philadelphia, were callers at the M.
E. parsonage over the past week-end.
The choir and orchestra were royally entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Reed last week, and the same hospitality will be shown them at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lovett, this week.

THE OFFICIAL DEATH-KNELL

The death-knell of trusty old Dobbin is being officially sounded. For years his tribe has been decreasing; until the few of his kind left in the horse-world, are seldom seen upon the streets. To the motoring public a horse and carriage upon a thoroughfare are an impediment to faster means of locomotion and nothing more. Oftimes the language is not choice when a horse and cart is in the lead of a long stream of traffic.

Another association, organized to protect horse-owners, is about to go out of existence. The Mutual Horse Thief-Detecting Society at York has applied for the right to dissolve, its services apparently being no longer needed.

During the past several years the horse has not been a popular animal for transportation purposes, as the horseless carriages grew in number. This is just another example of man's progress. Not because of any lack on the part of the faithful steeds is their popularity decreasing, but because of man's ingenuity in the mechanical line.

Not because there is a smaller amount of work attached to playing groom to a gas-buggy than to a horse—for even the auto eats gasoline while the horse required its grain; water must be carried to both; some trouble is experienced from time to time by the shoes of both; and now instead of repairing in an improvised manner, new parts sometimes replace the old for the four-wheeled vehicle.

There is only one answer necessary to show the advantage of the gas-buggy over the gasless one—speed and consequently saving of much time.

The horse has served his master well, and there is still need for his services in some fields. But as progress continues and things speed up in the world of business it is necessary for man to save himself in time and energy, in order that he might continue to progress.

IT IS FALL

Lodges are getting their winter's activities under way. Young folks are wooing Terpsichore again. There is a smell of camphor in many homes as mah jong sets are being opened up. New loud speakers are being installed for the radio. Study circles are resuming. There is hot competition around the reading lamp for possession of the home town paper. Bridge is still played. There is some demand for corn-poppers. The ice man looks a little glum but the electric-light meter reader wears a smile like a split watermelon as he sets down the figures.

It has been a wonderfully fine summer with more than usual opportunities for outdoor enjoyments, because of the unbroken sunshine which continued for so long. But it will be fine to have the fall rains, too, and later the nip of frost and the sheen of snow. Just as one of the fine things about going away from home is to come back there, so one of the fine things about a prolonged summer is that finally we come to its end and to normal change. Seasons lend variety and prevent monotony. And each of them in Bristol is enjoyable.

The poor foreigner learning American can't tell whether "dirt" refers to soil, politics or literature.

It's a sad world. You go into a garage when your engine is missing, and when you come out your tools are.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough to whom she is betrothed. Neither Kildare nor Murtough hold steady jobs and Sheila works as a waitress. Her only friends are the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer, whose kindness interests her. Murtough betrays to a rival bootlegging gang the hiding place of $150,000 contraband. A chase of plots to double cross him out of his reward which was to have been $5,000.

"You'd never get any place with Clocker except driving a car and there's no money in that. At least not enough to buy what your little sweetie wants to have. You'll have to make a lot of money, Big Boy, after we're married, but we two can work together. I got a real bright mind, you know."

"You sure have," agreed Murtough, infatuated with her flattery.

"When we get it all set and straightened out," she went on, "we'll hop out to Detroit. I got some friends out there. I got some friends in Chicago, too. They'll all help put us in right and we'll be getting big money before long. All anyone needs is the capital to start and what with five grand in our kick we'll be all set. You sure pulled it off fine! And we'll have our last blowout at the West End Dance, won't we, Big Boy, right under the nose of Mannie Clocker and his whole gang."

"Hain't we better cut out the dance?" suggested Murtough. "It looks dangerous to me."

"Don't be a simp. Who knows you had anything to do with this, and besides, who's going to wise up Clocker that the raid is going on, until it's over. Them babies you was dealing with aren't going to let none of the Clocker crowd down there get to a telephone, you know."

"But I don't care much about hanging around."

"We'll go, Big Boy, and I'm going to look my best, so let your sweetie have enough for a new party dress. I want to buy it this afternoon after I get my beauty sleep."

Murtough counted out some bills and gave them to her. Clarice smiled three remaining twenty dollar bills.

"Let me have a couple of more, Big Boy. I need shoes and stockings, too. A twenty will get us out from under this check all right."

Murtough frowned, but he passed the money to her and shoved the remaining bill into his vest pocket. Clarice was certainly an expensive person, he thought.

CHAPTER XII
The West End Club Dance

Sheila sang with joy as she bustled about the flat making ready for the dance at the West End Club. Not only did she have her own room, but she had a maid make her beautiful, if that could be possible, but there was Old Tom to help. His fine, old broadcloth long coat, turned a bit green with age since the days when it was cut for him by the traveling tailor from Dublin who visited Killanmaul every two or three years, had to be brushed and made ready and the buttons put in his Sunday boiled front shirt and all, but Sheila did not mind this night.

A new dress and stockings and shoes had been purchased and even Emmett, in spite of all his entangling adventures, had not forgotten a corsage of flowers. Every once in a while Sheila stopped in the midst of her preparations to run to the stand and smell the precious bouquet. It would be her first big party, the first ball that she ever had attended in all her twenty years. And how she loved Emmett for escorting her to this grand affair, where she would meet the people who were his fine business friends!

It was after ten when Emmett, dressed in a tuxedo that fitted so snugly that the breeze in his huge arms stood out, arrived. He had spent an hour with the barber; his face had been shaved to satin softness and his hair sleeked to his head until hardly a ripple of the wave in it showed. Certainly Emmett was a fine figure of a man and a very proper representative in this new country of Killanmaul, thought Sheila. She kissed him gratefully upon the cheek for his flowers and if Emmett blushed it was absorbed in the flush of his own face due to the hot towels of the barber.

"Ah, Emmett," she cried, "I am so happy tonight! To think that you and me and father are all going together to this grand affair. The lovely of ye to take us, so it is, Emmett Murtough, an' I love ye for it!"

Emmett made no reply. He was in a silent mood. Too many confusing thoughts ran through his mind to permit much of the boasting badinage that usually marked his treatment of Sheila, even when in a gentle humor.

"Well, 'tis a happy father I am the night," Old Tom added to Sheila's thanks. "What with ye taking yer rightful place among the bigwigs an' dressed as good an' grand as the next one, I'm thinking, an' you an' Sheila having patched it up, 'tis indeed an' indeed happy I am."

"Sheila will be the queen of the ball, I'm thinking," said Murtough in an effort to join in the spirit of the occasion. "My, but 'tis a pretty girl ye are!"

"None of yer blarney now," cried Sheila but more than pleased at the compliments of her lover. "An' there'll be many a prettier girl there that'll be wishing to know who I'm with," she added.

"I couldn't see any of them, blinded as I am with you, Sheila, darling."

The assembly room at the club from which all furniture had been removed for the dancing was festooned gaily. Flags of America and the Irish Free State were intertwined and hung at every conceivable place and bunting draped all the four walls. An orchestra was hidden behind palms and ferns and a spotlight played from one corner, while catercornered from it was a projector of different colors to be used when the dances were on. The clubrooms downstairs were thronged when Murtough and Kildare arrived. A committee of club officials greeted every corner and Murtough met men whom he never had so much as seen before. Sheila was presented to everyone and men from all over the hall flocked to be introduced to her.

Her modesty and fresh prettiness, straight from the "ould sod" as one patriarch said, appealed particularly to the elderly men and women. In her they saw the old fashioned girl, with long hair, and with becoming blushes at their compliments, and they loved her for it. These oldsters did not improve so much of their children and grandchildren who had clipped their fine tresses and who depended upon rouge and lip stick for their healthy appearance instead of fresh air and sunshine which has made the cheeks of Irish colleens famed the world over for their beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Shea were among the first to recognize and greet her and it was through them that Sheila was presented to a score of the heads of the fine old Irish families whose sons were now famous for their accomplishments. Rory was not with his father and mother when Sheila arrived. He had joined some of the younger men of the club and was sitting away the time watching the dancers. It was on the ballroom floor that he caught his first glimpse of her. Emmett and Sheila were dancing and as he recognized Rory she waved to him and smiled at him around the heavy set Murtough.

At the end of the dance Murtough escorted her to the chairs occupied by the O'Sheas and Old Tom Kildare.

"I must leave ye now for a little while," he told her. "'Tis some business for the club, for the good of the party," he explained.

"Don't be gone long, Emmett, an' she hesitated and drew him down to her, "ye won't be drinking the night?"

"Of course not," he answered, but there was the old surly tone in his voice. The smile fled from Sheila's face as he disappeared in the crowd. Soon she was laughing and talking, however, and when Rory came to her for the next dance she was as sparkly with gaiety. At the end of the dance Rory asked if she would go downstairs for lemonade and she accepted.

They made their way through the crowd to the stairs and pushed their way through a greater crowd below until they stood near the refreshment stand. Rory obtained cold drinks and as Sheila lifted the glass to her lips she spied Emmett and with him was a girl whom she never before had seen.

of its location, just beside the Atlantic, and the topography of the land, the weather is what might be termed ideal.

Many of the uncivilized natives have fashioned their homes of corner posts, upon which thatched roofs rest. The side-walls are usually made of a material similar to matting, while oft-times mud is used.

The chief means of transportation is by automobile or boat. The roads are not of improved surface, owing to the short time motor-driven vehicles have been employed for traveling purposes. Many small articles, which are to be taken from one point to another in the interior are carried by the natives upon their heads.

This government in the heart of Africa, which was set up by the Liberians, has steadily grown, till today its autonomy is recognized by all of the principal powers of the world. No financial or military support has been needed from any other government, and the strides made by the people there are marvelous, considering the problems they have faced.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell expect to spend six months here, after which the former will again engage in his duties as supervisor of customs for the Liberian government.

Leaving Monrovia on the 24th of July the couple spent several weeks touring Europe. Points of interest in Scotland, England, Belgium and France were thoroughly enjoyed, and their destination, Bristol, was reached last Sunday.

Mrs. Russell numbers many among her friends here, having resided for several years in the borough and attended the Bristol public schools. Mr. Russell was a frequent visitor in town.

Hulmeville

Owing to the regular meeting night of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church occurring during the week when rally services will be held, the session will be advanced, and will take place on Tuesday night, September 27th, at the home of Mrs. Joseph Darrah, of Middletown Township.

Tunney Retains World's Title; Defeats Dempsey

badly as he did in that first fight at Philadelphia.

Yes, except for that brief but, seemingly, all too lengthy interval in the seventh, Tunney always was the winner and great though Dempsey was, he was the loser because, by his hesitancy, he proved that he was not the killer of old.

Age does that to the Jesse Jameses of this life and it did it again to Jack Dempsey in the seventh round last night. But whereas an aged Jesse might have missed his man at twenty paces, the Dempsey of last night plugged his prey but couldn't keep him plugged, and incidentally, he took quite a plugging himself, which combination of circumstances has forced me this day to bare my bald pate in reverse to the gent who so richly deserves it.

We know why so many observers thought Dempsey unbeatable before 1923.

It was a great fight, well worth the record crowd of 150,000 that saw it; and well worth a $40 ringside seat, well worth the record gate of $2,500,000 provided anything is worth forty dollars and ringside doesn't mean outside or nearly so.

Yes, a great fight. But it takes two men to make any fight and Gene Tunney was the other. He proved that when he got up after that left and right to the jaw in the seventh. Further than that, no one except himself knows whether he could have arisen earlier, had he wished. He merely stood, or perhaps I should say, he lay within his rights in waiting until he heard the referee say "nine."

Any brief for the referee, however, may be held elsewhere. He ignored at least ten of Dempsey's punches that were at or near the belt line, and possibly four of Tunney's, and in the eighth round he started to out-count his time keeper over the fallen Dempsey.

Still, I maintain that the fight, as such, was an epic. For three rounds, it was nothing. Both men were feeling the other out, an unusual procedure for Dempsey, and perforce nothing happened. But late in the fourth, Tunney crossed a series of rights to Dempsey's jaw and Jack was rubber-legged and drooling from the mouth, absolutely out, when the bell saved him.

But the man is hardly human, even at his advanced age, and so he was able to stall his way through the fifth round and, then revived anew, to win the sixth in a series of wild exchanges. Then the seventh!

The drama developed suddenly in the first minute of play, the synopsis being a left hook to Tunney's jaw, dropping him in a sitting position on the second strand of the ropes. The climax was the following right, which deposited him on the floor. The denouement was Dempsey's failure to do anything.

The rest was tragic. Having run away from his impending doom, Tunney finally was able to make a stand in the eighth and, in the midst of it, he nailed Dempsey with a left uppercut for a knockdown on the eighth. That was the turning point.

From that moment, Tunney won every exchange and at the end was trying desperately for a knockout that never came.

And 150,000 persons were glad that it didn't. For the gamester makes all men his friends.
